POOR CLERK AT THE HAGUE—CONFESSION OF THE CRIME.

LONDON, October 12 .- The particulars of a most atrocious crime, committed a short time ago, are published in the English papers this morning. It has an especial in-terest for those who have made the Charley-Ross case a study, as the confession of mur-der made a few days ago shows that in this as in the American case the object of the criminals was to obtain a large amount of money as a ransom. William Marianus de Jongh, clerk to the Minister of the Colonies at the Hague, con-fesses to murdering a school-boy named Marius Bogaardt, a son of a former Secretary-General, now living a retired life. The murderer laid his plans very cunningly, and before securing the boy had written a letter to the father asking for 75,000 guilders, or $30,000, for the surrender of his son, but how and where the ransom was to be paid was not clear, though it is supposed De Longh had accomplices. The confession of Jorgh had accomplices. The confession of how the murder was committed was told by the prisoner to his sister, to whom he was devotedly attached. De Jongh wept bitter-ly while giving the following account of the motives and circumstances under which the murder took place:
